- 1. What the company supplies. Three things only: the QuickBooks Online report "Profit and Loss by Customer" (or "Project profitability summary"), the QuickBooks Online report "Invoice List", and the one-page job sheet. No bank statements, tax returns, passwords or full QuickBooks backups. Anything else that arrives is deleted unread.
- 2. Whose figures they are. Every figure is the company's own. The owner confirms that the figures supplied are, to the best of the company's knowledge, complete and correct, and that the company may share them for this purpose.
- 3. What the schedule is not. It is prepared from the figures the company supplies. It is not audited, reviewed or compiled, and it is not accounting, tax or legal advice. It makes no promise about bonding capacity or about any surety's decision.
- 4. Who receives it. The finished schedule goes to the company, and to anyone the company names in writing below (for example its bond agent or accountant). To nobody else.
- 5. Where it is processed. By Nouman Sadiq, using AI-assisted tools, in a temporary workspace. The figures are not loaded into any client system and not stored on any server that runs client systems.
- 6. Deletion. The company's files and the finished schedule are deleted 30 days after delivery, and the company gets an email confirming it. The company keeps its own copy of the schedule.
- 7. Use. The data is never sold and never used for marketing. It is used only to make this schedule.
- 8. Cost. There is no charge for the schedule and no obligation to buy anything.
